

My Poem

The Old Tree Atop The Hill

As the deep fog crept over the landscape,
The sun shone dimly through the clouds,
And the gnarled fingers stretched out in all directions,
And the vast trunk held the tree in place,
The few green patches in the bark,
Gave the colour to it,
And the grass stretched forever.

Maisie N.

St. Richard's Catholic College